I have made Tampa Bay my home now since 1996. I built my PR company, published my first international best-selling book “No Fear Speaking” here and established wonderful relationships throughout our very aesthetic region. I find it very easy and natural to thrive here.

I have experienced the fortune of traveling to numerous countries to promote my multi-lingual books and materials, to speak at many international events and consult leaders in business and government. I came to realize a common thread among the diversity of these nations is the willingness to learn from each other, to strengthen their success potential and gain the edge to service internationally.

I consistently invite my U.S. and international clients and colleagues abroad to come to Tampa Bay and visit the beaches, feel the friendly culture while they receive PR, Leadership and Public Speaker training at my facility in Largo. It is a perfect environment to combine professional learning with an opportunity to exhale in a beautiful paradise-like setting.

My wife, Elisa, born in Venezuela, relishes the Hispanic influence here. And now, I have become a Rays, Bucs and Lightning fan and so easy to convert since the fan base enthusiasm is so very hard to resist and the teams have built such a winning attitude.

I must admit that after a long speaking tour through multiple countries with numerous events and client sessions, the idea of returning home really clicks in at the precise moment I leave the airport crossing the Courtney Campbell causeway with water surrounding me on both sides.

“Thank God, I am home!!

As my company purpose is to advise and develop business and community leaders to become highly respected and widely recognized authorities in their industry, I cannot help but feel that Tampa Bay has consistently achieved this high standard as a state region where other communities around the nation, if not the world, look at Tampa Bay as an aspiring ideal to set the gold standard for.
